Do you need to know what your number is for international calls? If you are in australia, type your phone number in international international like: Check the code + phone number, including the area code less than 0. For example, if your phone number in Sydney is (02) 1234 5678, then your international phone number in Australia is written as this 61 2 1234 5678. For mobile phones This is usually written as +61 4 1234 5678. The + sign shows the correct international mark code has been used. To make an international call first need the marking code. This is also called output code. Each country has its own output code, for the UK it's 00, and for the US. U.S. It's 011. Then you need the dial code or the international number of the country you want to call. The dial in the Australian code is 61, the UK is 44 years old and the U.S. U.S. It's 1. Finally you need the international phone number you are trying to dial, either a fixed number or a mobile phone number. By marking an area code internationally, drop the code 0. How do I make an international call from Australia? It makes an international call from Australia through the Australian marking code (0011), then the dial in the country code, followed by the phone number, dropping the first zero in the area code. For example, to call an international lline or international mobile phone number from Australia to the UK, first, dial the Australian exit code (0011), followed by the Dial in the UK Code (44), then the phone number, which falls the first 0. Ordering the UK Number 01234 567981 would Seem like this: 0011 44 1234 567891. On a mobile phone you can also use the + sign instead of Australia's exit code, as well: +44 7234 567891. The + sign on a mobile phone replaces the dial code. It is also important to consider implementing an international call plan for your business.
